

ATS Call for Papers
2018 Annual Meetings, Denver, CO
Theme: Holy Spirit

The Adventist Theological Society invites proposals for its annual meetings to be held in Denver, CO, Wednesday, November 14 through Sabbath, November 17, 2018. The theme is “Holy Spirit.”

From the moving of the Spirit in Genesis 1 to the final invitation in Revelation 22:17, the Scriptures are filled with the activities of the Holy Spirit. This year’s ATS Fall Symposium theme gives us the opportunity to articulate both the full divinity and personhood of the Holy Spirit, as well as the many roles designated to the Holy Spirit in Scripture regarding creation, salvation, inspiration, teaching, guiding, and comforting. We welcome papers from a broad range of fields and perspectives including biblical, theological, philosophical, historical, sociological, missiological and practical theological studies. Papers can specifically address factors that have shaped our understanding and conceptual development of the Holy Spirit such as cultural, ethnic, religious, gender, social, cognitive, scholastic, historiographical, as well as how these have influenced personal religious experience.

The Adventist Theological Society affirms a high view of Scripture. As such, all proposals should adhere to the methodology set forth in the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventist’s document “Methods of Bible Study.”

Proposal Deadline: FRIDAY, APRIL 6, 2018.

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES:

Proposals must be in MS Word format and include an abstract (200-300 words) summarizing the main thesis and trajectory of argumentation. Include in the proposal the paper title, the author’s full name, institution, mailing address, and email address.
